Scripture Readings

1st Reader (0:00 - 0:00): Wyatt Woosley

Mark 1:21-22 (NASB): They went into Capernaum; and immediately on the Sabbath He entered the synagogue and began to teach. ²² They were amazed at His teaching; for He was teaching them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

2nd Reader (0:00 - 0:00): Tom Freed

Matthew 8:23-27 (NASB): When He got into the boat, His disciples followed Him. ²⁴ And behold, there arose a great storm on the sea, so that the boat was being covered with the waves; but Jesus Himself was asleep. ²⁵ And they came to Him and woke Him, saying, "Save us, Lord; we are perishing!" ²⁶ He said to them, "Why are you afraid, you men of little faith?" Then He got up and rebuked the winds and the sea, and it became perfectly calm. ²⁷ The men were amazed, and said, "What kind of a man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him?"

Summary of Transcript (0:04 - 22:01), Preacher: Mike Mathis

The sermon titled Respecting Christ's Authority, Part 1, delivered by Mike on January 25, 2026, emphasizes the need to recognize and submit to Jesus Christ's supreme authority as demonstrated through his teachings, miracles, and commands.

(0:04 - 1:57) Introduction and Anecdotes on Rejecting Christ's Words

The preacher, Mike, begins by introducing the lesson's theme: respecting Christ's authority. He shares a story from an article about a Christian brother on an airplane who read Jesus' teachings to a fellow passenger, only for the man to dismiss them as merely Christ's personal opinion. This leads into a personal recollection from years earlier in West Virginia, where someone compared denominations to branches on a tree that diverged from Jesus' original teachings because people disliked certain parts and altered them. The analogy highlights that these branches produce different "fruit," which is impossible in nature since every tree bears after its own kind. Mike stresses that true followers should not deviate from what Jesus taught, as his words carry inherent authority rather than being optional opinions.

(1:58 - 5:22) Jesus' Teaching Authority in the Gospels

Jesus consistently taught with unmistakable authority, astonishing his hearers. In Matthew 7:28-29 and Mark 1:21-22, crowds were amazed because he did not teach like the scribes, who relied on traditions and citations, but spoke directly and authoritatively. Within the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5), Jesus repeatedly contrasted human traditions with his own declarations, using the phrase "You have heard it said... but I say to you" six times to assert his superior authority. Even apart from these specific contrasts, the overall manner of his teaching conveyed divine power and certainty, setting him apart from religious teachers of his day who lacked such boldness.

(5:23 - 7:13) Authority Over Nature

The sermon transitions to Jesus' demonstrated power over the natural world, referencing the account in Matthew 8:23-27 where a fierce storm threatened to sink the boat while Jesus slept. His disciples, terrified, woke him pleading for rescue. Jesus rebuked the winds and sea, bringing immediate calm, prompting the men to marvel at who could command even nature itself to obey. Mike underscores that this authority exists because Jesus is the Creator of the universe, and power and authority are often used interchangeably in describing his actions.

(7:16 - 12:03) Authority Over Demons

Moving to Mark 5:1-20, Mike, recounts the dramatic encounter with the demon-possessed man in the region of the Gerasenes. This man, dwelling among tombs, possessed extraordinary strength that allowed him to break chains and shackles; no one could restrain or tame him as he cried out and cut himself night and day. Upon seeing Jesus, the man ran and worshiped him, but the demons inside cried out in fear, recognizing him as the Son of the Most High God and begging not to be tormented. When Jesus commanded the unclean spirit to leave, the demons identified themselves as "Legion" because they were many. They pleaded not to be sent out of the country but to enter a nearby herd of about two thousand swine. Jesus permitted this, and the pigs rushed down the steep bank into the sea and drowned. Witnesses fled in terror, and when people came to investigate, they found the formerly possessed man sitting clothed and in his right mind. Overcome with fear, the locals begged Jesus to leave their region. The healed man desired to follow Jesus, but Jesus instructed him instead to return home and proclaim the great things the Lord had done for him and his compassion, which the man did throughout the Decapolis, causing all who heard to marvel.

(12:08 - 15:10) Reflections on the Demons' Recognition and People's Fear

The demons immediately recognized Jesus' identity and authority but were not permitted to confess him publicly. They feared being sent into the abyss and instead requested entry into the swine, which Jesus allowed, resulting in their destruction along with the herd. Mike reflects on the locals' intense fear, possibly triggered by the loss of the swine or witnessing such supernatural power. They had known the man as uncontrollable and violent, yet now he sat calmly with Jesus, fully restored. Despite this miracle, the people pleaded for Jesus to depart. The healed man wanted to accompany Jesus, but Jesus sent him home to testify, and his proclamation led to widespread amazement at what Jesus had accomplished.

(15:12 - 19:39) Authority in His Touch and Healing Power

Jesus also exercised authority through his touch. In Mark 1:40-45, a leper approached, kneeling and imploring cleansing if Jesus was willing. Moved with compassion, Jesus touched the man—something strictly forbidden under the Law of Moses, which required lepers to remain isolated and warn others by crying "Unclean!"—and declared, "I am willing; be cleansed." The leprosy departed immediately. Jesus then instructed the man to show himself to the priest and offer the required sacrifices as a testimony. Mike notes additional examples of Jesus' power in touch, including raising a twelve-year-old girl from death by taking her hand and commanding her to arise, after which she revived and was given food. These acts demonstrate his authority to cleanse, heal, and raise the dead through direct contact.

(19:40 - 22:01) Call to Respect Christ's Authority and Invitation

The sermon concludes by urging respect for Christ's authority, as he issues commands that must be obeyed rather than dismissed as the opinions of an ordinary man. His authority extends to salvation, requiring belief, repentance, confession of his name, and immersion in baptism for the remission of sins. Those who have previously obeyed but strayed are encouraged to return, allowing the church to pray for them and be restored to faithfulness until death. Mike invites anyone needing to respond to Christ in any way to come forward during the invitation song. He announces that Part 2 of the lesson will continue that evening on the conference call and closes by reinforcing the call to respect Christ's authority.
